Early yesterday morning the Armory of the 22d Regiment, in Fourteenth-st., was alive with the members of that command, engaged in making preparations for the proposed encampment at Long Branch, N. J. Preparations being completed at 10:15 o'clock, the regiment, under the command of Col. Post, left the Armory and marched to the toot of West Eighteenth-st., where it was embarked on beard the steamer Jesse Hoyt, and was soon on the way down the harbor. The trip was enlivened by the moste of the regimental, band, varied by "Col."

THE LABOR MOVEMENT.

THE EIGHT-HOUR MOVEMENT-MASS MEETING OF WORKINGMEN IN AID OF THE BRICK-LAYERS' STRIKE - SPERCHES, RESOLUTIONS,

A mass meeting of mechanics and laboring men of this city was held at Cooper Institute, last ever ing, under the auspices of the New-York Workingmen's Union, for the purpose of expressing sympathy with the journeymen bricklayers of this city who are now on a strike for the enforcement of the cight-hour law. The Hall was filled to overflowing; and there was an audience of not less than 3,000 people outside, who were THE POLITICAL THERMOMETER-CHURCH, HOFFMAN, | addressed by speakers from a platform erected for the CORNING, AND MURPHY.

then controverted the averments of the master-masons, to the effect that the journeymen refused to allow a boss to work on his own job along with his employés. All that the rules of the organization require is that no one shall work on a job who is not a member of the Society. But, apart from this, he believed that out of the 350 master masons in this city, not more than 30 knew how to lay a brick. The speaker closed by exhorting the men to remain firm, and predicted that success would surely result from the strike.

brick. The speaker closed by exhouses would surely result main firm, and predicted that success would surely result from the strike.

The Hon. Patrick Keady of Brooklyn, the author of the Eight Hour law, then addressed the meeting. It gave him much pleasure, he said, to cooperate with his fellow-workingmen in this movement, the object of which was of the highest importance to all who reside in New-York. They had assembled simply to give a practical enforcement to the laws of the State and the nation. Six years ago the workingmen had net together in that building to protect their rights by organization, and since then the movement had spread with amazing rapidity, so that now, there was not a town in the whole country which did not have its inbor organization. Many attempts were made to get the eight-hour system adopted, but it was found to be impossible unless the movement had the sanction of law. The matter was then pressed upon the consideration of successive Legislatures. In the Legislature which passed the Eight-Hour law all the questions connected with it, all the interests likely to be affected by it were carefully considered. The proposed law had many opponents in the legislative body. The farmers there, especially, set themselves against it; but when the matter was explained to them; when they were assured that it was not intended to infringe on any of their rights they gave their support to it; it was passed and in a day or two afterward Governor signed. The next speaker was Mr. James Fortune, President of the Plasterers' International Union. He said that he was happy to meet his fellow workmen, deplorable as was the circumstances under which they met. The meeting afforded proof that working men were getting able to conduct their own affairs. In that power of eloquent expression which long practice in speaking conferred, they might not be able to to compete with the gentlemen in Liberty-st., but still when they have a grevance they are able to make it understood. The eight hour question in which they were all so vitally interested was easy of comprehension to any one who desired to understand it. The employers were very stupid if they did not appreciate the fact that on that issue the workingmen were certain to prove victorious. They pretended to think that if a man was to work but eight hours he would be sure to speak of that on that issue the workingmen were certain rove victorious. They prefended to think that if a masto work but eight nours he would be sure to specie other two in the rum shops. There was no great ustake. Mechanics has got over their failing in regarding the would state to them that failing had be sken advantage of to keep them poor and powerle he workingmen propose to devote those two how other purposes than drinking rum. They proposed a away into the country, which they could not do under present system, and refreshing themselves by head as the fresh air. It was said that if they conquered the ond be the losers in the shape of the increased relay would have to pay. But so far as that was concern when not their intention to remain in the city at a
